

Thank you for the time today XXXXXXXXXXXX.

Appreciate your experience in the field, and your work in exposing violent threats and terrorism.

If you needed an official statement, here is something below. My general philosophy though is that if the threat was real enough to take down, then it is probably real enough to desire retaliation. Especially if you are dealing with legitimate terrorism influencers. We work to protect our staff and employees of course from any possible backlash that can come from doing the right thing. The action is seen as enough, and the accolades or positive references we do not seek or encourage. It can simply create resentment and dangerous environments for our staff and employees.

If you need a statement regarding our general policies:

As a registrar, our primary focus is on premium domain names, as we connect buyers and sellers through our international marketplace of more than 2 million digital assets that drive new applications and marketing campaigns. We have zero tolerance for any content that may inspire others to commit acts of violence, or that drive hateful degrees of separation and division based on nationality, skin color, or spiritual belief. We believe those rooted first in deep appreciation and respect for others, can then begin the process of transforming the world around them with love, compassion, kindness, and humility. This planet is too small to not seek every avenue possible for optimistic reconciliation and peaceful unity with one another.

I hope this helps Sir! Feel free to connect or stay in touch in the future with projects you may be working on. Always happy to find others that walk in the path of service to others, with hopeful anticipation for better days tomorrow.

Peace and blessings,
